Employment First in Alabama —

Are We Making the Grade?

Employment first is a national movement that calls for a framework for systems change that is centered on the premise that all citizens, including individuals with significant disabilities, are capable of full participation in integrated employment and community life. Alabama has been working to improve employment outcomes for individuals with intellectual/developmental and other disabilities. How are we doing? In this workshop, participants will have the opportunity to score the progress the state has made to increase employment outcomes and expand Employment First. The workshop will also spotlight some of the initiatives that are helping expand and improve employment opportunities and outcomes.
